New Gymnasium Named in Honor of J. H. Jones

An estimated 2,000 persons turned out last night at the formal opening and dedication of the school's new $150,000 gymnasium. The structure was officially named Jones High House in honor of James H. Jones, superintendent of public schools.

Albert Graves opened the night's activities as master of ceremonies and called on Rev. V. D. Keelley to give the invocation.

Fans sportsmanship was the subject of a short talk by Charles R. Tittle, president of the student council.

Terrell Cornelius, member of the first Hope Basketball team introduced other members present. They were John P. Vesey, J. Pat Duffie, Elmer Murphy and Harvey Barr.

Also introduced were Architect Dave Weaver, plumbing contractor Harry Shiver, the mayor and city officials and other dignitaries.

Roy Taylor, president of the Booster Club, made a short talk.

Following introduction of coaches, Mrs. Norma Taylor introduced her senior girls, team. Coach Wayne Taylor introduced his senior boys squad, both A and B and coach John Pierce introduced 9-B and 7th grade teams.

Coach Dwight Jones of Nashville introduced both his boys and girls teams.

Also recognized were members of the school board, Mrs. C. C. McNeill, Dick Watkins, Jim LaGrossa, Norman Moore and Sam McGill.

Then Mr. Graves announced the surprise of the evening — that the school board had voted to name the gymnasium after Mr. Jones.

This ceremony was followed by the games.

Arkansas Bar Group Meets at Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK (AP) More than 400 Arkansas attorneys gathered here today for a workshop meeting of the Arkansas Bar Association. The featured panel discussion dealt with the medical side of personal injury actions.

Well-known attorneys at the meeting included Malvin M. Bell of San Francisco, Emilie Z. Beran of New York, chief counsel for the defense in the court-martial of Marine Sgt. Matthew C. McKoon, Draft W. Eldman of Houston, Robert D. Hudson of Tulsa, and Harry A. Gair of New York, author of several legal publications.

Four Little Rock physicians took part in the panel discussion on personal injury actions. They were Drs. Frank Padberg, Robert Watson, Kenneth G. Jones and John M. Hundley.

Eugene A. Matthews of Hot Springs is president of the Arkansas Bar Association.

Retired Rail Worker Dies Here Today

James A. Williamson, aged 74, died early today in a local hospital. He was the son of the late Col. and Mrs. J. A. Williamson of Columbus.

Mr. Williamson was a retired railroad man, a member of the Presbyterian church and a Mason. He is survived by two nieces, Mrs. Wm. Wilson of Columbus and Mrs. W. B. Orr of San Antonio, Texas.

Services will be held at 2 p. m. Sunday at the Columbus Presbyterian Church. Burial by Herndon-Cornelius will be in Columbus Cemetery.

Searcy Will Also Get a New Plant

SEARCY (AP) A metal products plant will be built here by James L. Matthews & Co. of Pittsburgh, the Searcy Industrial Corp. announced today.

Curtis Walker, president of SIPC, said the company will construct its own 25,000 square-foot building at an estimated cost of $12,500. The Searcy organization will furnish the site, Walker said.

The Matthews plant will manufacture bronze memorial plaques. Plans call for hiring of about 25 employees at first and eventual employment of 200 persons, Walker said. Construction is expected to begin late this year.

SECOND EST MISSILE — The second test missile in the Earth Satellite Project will arrive at the Cape Canaveral launching site on the Florida East Coast next week, Thomas W. Green, chief civilian safety officer, said. He doubts if the time of the satellite launching will be announced in advance.

LIFE IN "WORKERS' PARADISE"—This hovel, of earth, a few rough-hewn logs and a cold-blast roof, is typical of the homes of Russia's slave laborers in Siberia. Its inhabitant is an Estonian woman, whose son lives in New Jersey. She works 15 hours every night in a nearby project and has been living this miserable existence for 16 years. This photo was smuggled out of Siberia without her knowledge. To conceal her identity, her features have been obliterated and an identical, lying structure in the background has been cut out.

New Officers Elected by Rotarians

The Rev. Murray N. Brown, who has served 17 years with assembly of God Churches as missionary to Dapungo French Tago, West Africa was principal speaker at Friday's regular Rotary club meeting. He told of religious and customs of the country.

Lloyd Guerin was named president of the Rotary with Bill Tolson elected vice president.

The Rev. W. C. Land was elected secretary and George Walden, treasurer. New directors, Judge Lyle Brown and Charlie Wilson.

Visitors were C. E. Haer of Little Rock, Charles Janess of Jackson, Miss., Claud Evans of Casa Grande, Arizona, F. A. Brown, Hope, Cecil Watson and Dewey Stuart of Texarkana and Elmer Harris, of Stamps.

Rules Virginia Placement Plan Is Not Legal

NORFOLK, Va. (UP) Federal District Judge Walter E. Hoffman ruled today that Virginia's pupil placement plan to maintain school segregation is unconstitutional.

Hoffman rule against motions for dismissal of segregation suits against the school boards of Norfolk and Newport News, Va.

The pupil placement program enacted by Virginia is directly in the teeth of the language of the Supreme court, which declared the fundamental principle that racial discrimination in public education is unconstitutional, Hoffman said.

Gov. Thomas B. Stanley and Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, who defeated Hoffman in a 1953 race for attorney general, declined comment until they can study the ruling.

The attorneys for the two school boards had asked that segregation suits be dismissed because Virginia's pupil placement program offered administrative remedies to the Negro plaintiffs should seek before going to the federal courts.

"Manifestly, the governor of Virginia has suggested that there shall be no integration of races in the public schools of Virginia, irrespective of how slight it may be," Hoffman said.

"She question remains: has Virginia now enacted a constitutional act which is non-discriminatory in nature and not in violation of the 14th amendment?"

He answered his own question, "in compliance with my oath of office and my duty to determine matters from a legalistic viewpoint, I must answer in the negative."

"It is my firm conviction," Hoffman ruled, "that Virginia's new law is unconstitutional."

Governor Claims Favorable Response

LITTLE ROCK (AP) Gov. Orval Faubus today said he had received a generally favorable response to his legislative program which he discussed privately with two groups this week.

The program has not been made public but Faubus said he will discuss it in his second term inaugural speech Tuesday.

He is expected to suggest some tax increases, among them possibly a boost in the sales tax and in severance taxes — that is, taxes levied for removing or "severing" natural resources.

In reply to questions at a news conference, Faubus said that in his private conversations he had discussed in specific rather than in general terms how he would suggest that the state's revenues be allocated and methods for raising the necessary revenue.

State Colleges Get $189,370

LITTLE ROCK (AP) Collections of $189,370 in 1956 have been reported by the Arkansas Foundation of Associated Colleges.

Brig. Gen. Hugh Cort (ret.), executive director of the association of private colleges, said the money represented an increase of about $33,000 over collections in 1955.

The organization was formed in 1954 to provide higher teacher salaries.

Texan Fears Depression Is on Way

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Patman (D-Texas) contended today administration fiscal planners "are getting ready for a depression," he said, by continued tight credit and high interest rates.

"There are too many people in high places who honestly think we should go through a depression, and they give a great many arguments why it would be helpful to the private enterprise system," he said in an interview.

Any depression now, he contended, would be "entirely man made."

The administration has defended its present "hard money" policy, including higher interest rates and tighter credit controls, as a necessary safeguard against inflation.

Patman, who is frequently at odds with the administration on fiscal policy, criticized President Eisenhower's proposal to Congress yesterday for an independent investigation by a special commission of "the nature, performance and adequacy of our financial system."

He said it would only serve to delay enactment of possible congressional remedies, and asserted the President was "getting into our field. We're not telling him how to do his work."

Patman, a senior member of the House Banking Committee, is due to head up a broad investigation of credit policy under terms of a resolution he introduced last Monday — four days in advance of the President's message.

He contended the administration "evidently considers all economic expansion to have been inflation." He called that a "misconception," asserting "we've got to have some expansion every year just to give people jobs."

Career Man to Address Class

LITTLE ROCK (AP) Loy W. Henderson, who has a long and outstanding career with the U. S. State Department, will deliver the mid-year commencement address at the University of Arkansas Jan. 26.

Henderson is a native of Rogers, Ark.

Dean Co. to Build Own Milk Supply

LITTLE ROCK (AP) The president of Dean Milk Co. yesterday said his firm would build its own Arkansas milk supply "either within or outside the framework of CMAPA."

Sam Dean said his firm does not intend to continue to transport milk from Missouri and Illinois to its Conway, Ark., plant indefinitely.

Slayer of 44 Pays Penalty With His Life

By JAMES D. HARPSTER
CANON CITY, Colo. (AP) — Cobly accepting his fate, John Gilbert Graham was executed last night in Colorado's gas chamber for destroying an airliner that carried his mother and 43 other persons to death.

The 24-year-old father of two children gulped the cyanide fumes and passed into unconsciousness in seconds. He was pronounced dead in 12 minutes.

Graham was convicted of murdering his mother, Mrs. Daisie E. King, 53. She perished with 43 other men, women and children Nov. 1 1955, when a United Air Lines DC6B was shattered by a dynamite bomb. It crashed in a sugar beet field near Longmont, Colo.

Although he never disclosed a motive for planting a dynamite device in his mother's luggage, Graham named himself beneficiary in a $37,500 flight insurance policy he took out on his mother's life.

The husky, dark-haired killer went to death "the calmest I've ever seen," said deputy warden William Kinney, who has witnessed all 26 executions in Colorado's gas chamber.

The Rev. Justin McKernan, Roman Catholic chaplain at the prison visited Graham for 40 minutes last night in the death row cell where the young Denver business-man spent his last days. Their exchange of banter was interrupted when Graham saw warden Harry Tinsley mount the ramp of his cell.

"Well, I guess it's time," Graham said with resignation.

"God bless you," Father McKernan said. "I hope God will forgive you your sins."

"Okay," Graham nodded. "Not once during his stay in the gray stone-walled prison did Graham allude to the crime."

With Tinsley leading the way, Graham walked erect and swifly from his cell up a long ramp and into the penthouse death cell atop the prison's maximum security building.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-NJ) said today he believes the Senate will take the lead in this Congress in action on school construction legislation.

Smith, a Republican on the Labor Committee which handles such legislation, said he understood leaders in both branches had agreed the Senate should try to handle the tough issue first.

Speaker of the House Rayburn (D-Tex.) told reporters, however, he hoped that a school bill would be one of the first things acted on by the House this session.

And a Senate Democratic source predicted that the Senate, as it did last year, would wait until the House acts before passing on the proposal.

President Eisenhower, in his State of the Union message yesterday, urged that the Congress give "high priority" to a school year's bill to meet the nation's classroom shortages.

He told the lawmakers he hoped the measure would not be complicated by trying to tie provisions dealing with the "complex problems" of racial integration of schools.

Such a provision, sponsored by Rep. Powell (D-NY), led to defeat of a school construction bill in the House last year.

Smith said he plans to introduce the administration's school bill in the Senate Monday. He said it would call for the same $1 1/2 billion dollars of federal allotments as the 1956 version, but that the amount would be split over four years instead of five as in last year's bill. The new measure also is expected to contain some loan features as did the 1956 version.

Smith said it was felt that the Senate should work on the legislation first this time because it would be easier for that body to defeat any proposed integration amendment.

But he said it probably would be easier to beat such a proposal in both branches this session because "this is not an election year."

Other members of the team but not in the picture were Harvey Barr, Robert Wilson, Arthur Taylor and Archie Stevens.

McMillan Plans to Reshuffle Government

By HAL COOPER
LONDON (AP) Prime Minister Harold Macmillan shaped plans today for a broad reshuffle of the shaken Conservative government he inherited from Sir Anthony Eden.

Near the top of Macmillan's agenda as he settled into his first full day in his new office was the question of a post for Richard A. Butler, his passed-over rival for Britain's highest political post.

Butler, leader of the House of Commons under Eden, was reported to be willing to serve Macmillan in a similar capacity. But Macmillan was said to be loyally with the idea that Butler might be more usefully employed to succeed Selwyn Lloyd as foreign secretary.

Lloyd inevitably is associated with the disastrous consequences of the Egyptian military action launched by Eden and French Premier Mollet. It was not certain that Macmillan would decide to drop Lloyd, but his future at least was considered in doubt.

If Butler stays put as government leader in Commons, Colonel Secretary Alan Lennox-Boyd was tipped as a possible man for the Foreign Office.

Butler told a reporter he "will definitely serve in the new Cabinet, although the office I shall hold has not yet been decided."

"In public life, one has to do one's duty," Butler added. "I would certainly not desert the ship at a time like this."

Butler's support is of crucial importance to Macmillan and the Conservative party. Generally considered the No. 2 man to Eden throughout the previous government's 21 months in office, he has a strong bloc of supporters in the House of Commons.

In a recorded broadcast to the nation last night, Macmillan said he was forming a government he would present for Queen Elizabeth's approval "in a few days."

He paid tribute to his "old and very dear friend Anthony Eden," and appealed for united support.

"We have a difficult task before us," he said. "It will need all our courage and strength, and it will need the sympathy and understanding of every one in this country, whatever their party or beliefs."

There were indications Macmillan might visit Washington soon to rebuild U. S.-British friendship. The new Prime Minister and President Eisenhower are friends of World War II days, and high Washington officials said Macmillan will be welcome whenever he decides to make such a visit.

Macmillan's Conservative party colleagues and leaders of the splinter Liberal party pledged support for the new government.

The Liberal party, a minute group between the Conservative and Labor factions, could possibly exercise wide influence in the event of a close struggle between the two major parties.

Liberal party leader Joseph Grimond said Macmillan "must tell us what he wants from us and we will give it."

THE Labor party issued a demand for new national elections, declaring the "whole country should pronounce its verdict" on the changes in the political line-up. But Macmillan, asked by reporters if he planned to go to the voters, replied, "No. If there was (an election), we would win it."

The Conservatives' term normally would not expire until April 1960.

Macmillan's appointment drew general favorable comment from Western European capitals.

Lions to Hold Northwest Meet

CONWAY (AP) Representatives from 37 Lions Clubs in northwest Arkansas will hold their mid-winter meeting here tomorrow and Sunday.

George L. Seaman of Jacksonville, Fla., a Lions International director, will speak at a banquet tomorrow night. Ed Barry of Little Rock, first vice president, will speak at a Sunday luncheon.

More than 100 delegates are expected.

NOT EXTINGUISHED—Ornithologists are not ordinarily given to jumping at conclusions, but they appear to have done it in the case of Arment's cowlbird. Just because none had been seen since 1866, they decided this variety of cowlbird was extinct. Then, the other day, there came to the National Zoo in Washington a shipment of miscellaneous birds from Colombia, South America. Among them was the shiny black, beady-eyed Arment's cowlbird pictured above, basking in fame as the only specimen in captivity.

Openings Yet for Arkansas Traveler Unit

"Arkansas Travelers" will again represent the State on an extended journey. The "Travelers" will take the form of a Navy recruit company composed entirely of Arkansas men which will leave Little Rock on January 18, for the naval training center in San Diego, California.

The first 75 Arkansas men to qualify for enlistment in the Navy in 1957 will form the company. The "Travelers" will be sworn in as a unit in Little Rock on January 18, 1957 by Governor Orval Faubus at the State Capitol.

They will be flown to San Diego for recruit training. Upon completion of recruit training all men will be given two weeks leave. A Chief Petty Officer from Arkansas will lead the company.

The last all Arkansas company, "Arkansas Diamond Company," graduated with top honors on October 13, 1956 before state officials and newsmen flown to San Diego for the event by the Navy. Mr. Arnold Sikes, Executive Secretary to the Governor, presented the honor award to the company.

The individual who is named the honor man in this company will receive an official "Arkansas Traveler Certificate" from the state in recognition of his outstanding achievements as a Navy recruit. The men who qualify for the company will return to their homes until time for the swearing in ceremonies. Additional details and applications for the special company may be obtained from the Navy Recruiter at the Hope Post Office each Monday.

When Uncle Sam began supplying England and France with part of the oil they had lost by their ill-starred sortie into Egypt, the above-ground supplies of oil and its products here began to dwindle. The change from surplus to threat of tight supplies set the stage for a hike in price—at about the time oilmen had been conceding for months was justified by their costs.

The doubts some harbor about holding the new price line rise from two factors.

1. Prospects that the transportation and other difficulties in getting oil to Europe may be solved—Including the opening of the Suez Canal. A Jersey Standard Oil vice president, H. H. Hewetson, says Europe's normal oil needs might be met by May through improved conditions in the Middle East.

2. The mixed distribution pattern here, the lack of enough pipelines to carry all the extra oil products to seaports for export to Europe, may make the supply situation spotty in the United States. Some regions doubtless will feel little if any pinch.

In either event, surpluses could build up again. Price cutting and even price wars here and there might come back in the picture, some cautious oilmen stress.

But other oilmen just as stoutly maintain that the oil price increases are necessary. A Jackson, Miss., oil and gas producer, W. M. Vaughn, chairman of the executive committee of the Independent Petroleum Assn. of America says the hike is "urgently needed to strengthen the domestic petroleum industry."

He cites substantial increases in cost of oil production, and contends that without higher prices the incentive to seek new oil reserves would be weakened, if not lost.

The proposed Moos-Herings amendment would amend the law by adding this sentence: "This section does not authorize withholding information from the public or limiting the availability of records to the public."

Young Boy Saves His Mother — PITTSBURGH (AP) — Moments before a wrecked auto was smashed to bits on a suburban railroad crossing a 17-year-old boy pulled his 39-year-old mother to safety.

Police said Robert Spinello lost control of his car rounding a curve and the machine straddled tracks of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. HE was unhurt but, his mother, Mrs. Louise Augustine, was dazed when her head struck the windshield.

Spinello dragged his mother out of the machine just before a high speed freight hit it.

Gas Firm Makes More Cutoffs in Arkansas

SHE THINKS HE'S PURTY—No matter what you think of her offspring, Katherine, the Frankfurt, Germany, zoo's rhinoceros, is mighty proud of her new baby. Born Dec. 24, the 50-pound youngster is the first of its kind to be born in captivity.

FRANCE'S NEWEST—Pictured here are two new French stamps to be issued during January. They depict two extremes in the delivery of messages. The 15-franc stamp at top is dedicated to the carrier pigeon, while the 500-franc number, below, honors the fast delivery provided by France's new jet airliner "Caravelle."

GAZA 1896-1956 — Israel's postal officials have issued this postcard bearing cancellation marks dated from 1896 to 1956 to celebrate the reopening of the post office in Gaza, the seaport occupied by Israeli troops last October. The card will be a collector's item since no special stamp has been issued.

SWEET TOPPING — This spring toque by the irrepressible Mr. John of New York is sweet as sugar. And that's because it actually is made of spun sugar straw. He hasn't said what happens to his confection if a rainstorm comes up.

COLD FRONT—Folks in Cleveland, Ohio, shivered in sympathy with those Navy Seabees at the South Pole when the Lake Erie city's temperature dipped close to zero during the coldest days of the season. This ice-covered lakefront scene tells the story.

NEIGHBORS ARE POLE APART—Folks along Williams Avenue, in a suburban county area of Cincinnati are really divided. The western portion of the street is undedicated, hence not accepted by the county for upkeep. So, since early summer, the "westerners" have kept a utility pole barrier at their boundary to keep cars from the roadway. They say the move is necessary to protect their children from the heavy traffic caused by home building along the eastern section. Police say there is nothing they can do about the situation as the "grudge pole" is legal. It will remain there until the whole street is dedicated.

HIGHWAY—AND A BYWAY OF HISTORY—In ancient garb and driving their flock of camels and a laden burro just as did their forebears in Biblical days, these Jordanian Bedouins turn into a rocky byway near Bethlehem. In contrast, a modern highway winds from right behind them up the slope in the distance.

NO BOMBING, THIS—It looks like the aftermath of a blockbuster bombing raid, but this scene in Miami Beach, Fla., results from the work of professional house-wreckers. The rubble marks the fate of the once-proud McFadden-Deauville Hotel, a landmark for 30 years. Built at a cost of $500,000, the hotel spanned 500 feet of valuable ocean frontage. The late Bernarr McFadden, eccentric publisher of health magazines, was one of the original owners.

FIVE MAKES A "CONGREGATION"—Rev. Louis W. West shovels snow from the front of his "world's smallest church" at Hudson, Mass. The 71-year-old minister built the tiny church in his spare time. Its guest book holds signatures of 4,800 visitors, and 25 weddings have been performed in it. The five-by-eight-foot church can hold a "congregation" of five people, including the minister.

DEATH ON THE UP AND UP—Dramatic presentation of the rising tide of holiday traffic deaths is given by these charts displayed in Chicago by Paul Jones, of the National Safety Council and Secretary Dolores Olander. Her chart shows toll for 1955 and 1956 Christmas weekends. Jones' graph shows highway deaths from the previous New Year weekend.

WAR—EGYPTIAN VERSION—Future historians may believe that the Anglo-French invasion of Egypt was repulsed with heavy losses to the invaders if they judge by this new Egyptian stamp. It commemorates the recent fighting by showing three Egyptian "resistance" fighters, one a grenade-throwing girl, charging forward as enemy parachute troops are slain on the Port Said beach and an enemy ship burns in the background.

"LOOK, MA, NO HANDS!"—A picture of glee is 10-month-old Patty Lischors as she proudly balances on her mother's outstretched hand. Her "daring" is inherited. Her mother, Marion, thrills spectators at Ojus, Fla., by diving on horseback into a pool of water from a 40-foot tower.

DEADLY TRIANGLE—In this first official photo of the U.S. Air Force's new B-58 "Hustler," the bone-delta-winged bomber climbs sharply after take-off at Convair's Fort Worth, Tex., plant. Designed to operate at higher than 60,000 feet, the Hustler is powered by four J-47 turbojet engines and afterburners. The plane is 55 feet long, has a 45-foot wingspan and carries a crew of three.

Sunday School Lesson

By William E. Gilbey, D. D.

When we think of the wonderful life of Jesus, an almost inevitable further thought should be of the wonderful way in which the story of that life has been told.

Many questions arise concerning the four Gospels of the New Testament. It would seem that Luke was the only gospel writer who brought to his religious purpose high literary skill, unless one accord a large measure of literary talent, also, to the writer of the Gospel of John.

Matthew and Mark seem to have been inspired by the greatness of what they had to tell rather than by any special training of literary accomplishment.

Yet the fact remains that these disciples achieved a remarkable literary accomplishment by the simplicity, directness, and vividness with which they set down the details.

This is particularly true of the Gospel of Mark, in which the word "straightaway" typifies the immediacy and directness with which everything happens.

It should, of course, never be forgotten that the Twelve Disciples though some were fishermen, and all apparently were earning their daily bread when they met Jesus, were by no means uneducated or illiterate men.

The Jews, who in our own day show a pre-eminent regard for the importance of education, had in that ancient day a remarkably fine system of education in which schools were associated with the synagogues.

If the reader can find in his public library a copy of the book, "Jewish Artisan Life in the Time of Christ," by Franz Delitzsch, he will get a vivid impression of the effectiveness of that system, in which every Jewish boy was required to learn a trade.

The result was that even in the humblest occupations were men who had at least a good, basic education.

So that, in itself, might explain much concerning the New Testament. But beyond that was the wonderment of the story the gospel writers had to tell.

Their purpose was not literary, but religious, to get down the realities of the story of Jesus so that all who read might feel its power, and be drawn to the Master they had known and loved.

What method guided them in their task? Even in the brief ministry of Jesus a great deal must have happened of which there is no account. Why was much left out?

And what guided, or inspired, the writers in what they did set down?

My own judgment is that the talks and incidents reported were chosen, partly because they stood out most strongly in memory, and also because they emphasized the spiritual realities of what Jesus offered to men.

The incidents that have to do with feeding, healing, life-giving, in their physical aspect symbolize the deeper giving of the bread of life, the health of the soul, and the new life. They all seem to blend toward the portrait of the Christ in all His supreme greatness.

And that is why, and how, simple Jewish disciples educated, achieved in the four Gospels, the greatest story that has ever been told.

Strange Job for Minister's Daughter

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (W. M. A.) only get to when I'm paid for it. That's the philosophy of Helen Thurston, a pretty, shapely blonde and Baptist minister's daughter who is Hollywood's most noted stunt girl. And though she won't get tough in private, she can blow up a storm for the film cameras. She can fight battles and take falls that would make most males blanch.

I talked to Helen as she was getting her hair fixed up, only to have it messed in a fall into a tank of water. She was doubling for Kim Novak, who purportedly will be dumped into a tank for a carnival scene in "Jeannie" (Eagles). Simple job for Helen. You should hear about some of her tough ones.

"One of the best was for 'Man With the Golden Arm,' she related. 'I took the fall for Eleanor Parker, three floors into packing boxes and a mattress.'

"But I didn't like the way it came out in the picture. They shot the fall with five cameras and they took the wrong angle. It looked like a dummy falling. 'No dummy is Helen. She earns a handsome fee for her fall jobs—$500 for the 'Golden Arm' stunt, for example."

It's a strange racket for a minister's daughter. But even at home in Redding, Calif., she studied gymnastics. She played in vaudeville and landed in films 15 years ago.

Each stunt is priced individually, but Helen has standard rates for certain ones. A tumble down a staircase, like the one she did for Peggy Lee in "Pete Kelly's Blues," will run $350. A fall from a car traveling around in a yard and I'm always working out with the trampoline, archery, etc."

An ordinary stunt costs anywhere from $150. She likes the rough and tumble fights, but dislikes handling. "That's sissy stuff," she said emphatically.

Unlike stunt men, who are a bundle of broken bones, Helen has never had a serious injury. How does she manage to survive such a life?

"Condition is the answer," she said. "I have a gym in my back yard and I'm always working out with the trampoline, archery, etc."

No Holds Barred in Fracas

June Allyson's signal comes too late to prevent Ann Sheridan from letting the cat out of the bag regarding an item of considerable interest to Ann Miller. The scene is from M.G.M.'s sophisticated comedy-drama with music, "The Opposite Sex." Others in the all-star cast are Joan Collins, Dolores Gray, Leslie Nielsen and Jeff Richards.

Women—as men seldom see them—provide the hilarity as well as the dramatic fireworks of "The Opposite Sex," one of M.G.M.'s biggest productions of the year, opening Sunday at the Sanger.

June Allyson, Joan Collins, Dolores Gray, Ann Sheridan, Ann Miller, Leslie Nielsen and Jeff Richards head one of the most impressive stellar aggregations ever assembled for a single picture, with co-starring roles played by Charlotte Greenwood, Agnes Moorehead, Joan Blondell and Sam Levene. In addition, there are such "guest stars" as Harry James, Art Mooney, Dick Shawn and Jim Backus.

Filed in CinemaScope and Metrocolor, "The Opposite Sex" was made on a lavish scale against backgrounds ranging from New York City to the deserts of Reno, with its locales including such celebrated spots as the "21 Restaurant," the apartments of the city's upper-crust, the last word in beauty salons, front and backstage at a theater, and a Reno dude ranch covering ten acres.

New Shows Old Comedy Situations

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP) Two new "situation comedies" are not available to viewers on Friday evenings, having tripped onto the home screen a week ago. On NBC-TV is "Blondie." On CBS-TV is "Mr. Adams and Eve."

Two thirteenth old situations these comedies share. In each the husband is bumbling and egotistical and the wife is bright as a pin. Personally I'm getting pretty tired of these old domestic conceits. Just about all the laughs have been squeezed out of it by a score of regular "situation" TV programs which proclaim themselves to be "comedies."

In "Blondie" Arthur Lake plays Dagwood, the way they tell him to play it: as a good-hearted moron. Pamela Britton is Blondie, his more intelligent wife. The dogs, the kids, Mr. Ditchers—they're all there.

To me the Dagwood of the comic strip is a fascinating character who is far from being a moron. He's completely human, a man fighting for scraps of independence in a world that is trying to organize him.

His laziness, but ingenious. He's a realist, but he cannot escape his social responsibilities. Blondie is a more intelligent wife; at times she seems a bit more realistic until you begin to wonder, is she really?

All this is life. It's human, and so it's the essence of fine comedy.

As with "Blondie" and every other regular TV program—it may be unfair to judge "Mr. Adams and Eve" on the basis of the first show. This Hollywood couple of married stars is appropriately played by a Hollywood married couple of stars—Ida Lupino and Howard Duff.

There's absolutely nothing the matter with them. They're fine players. Their problem, in the initial program, was that they were stuck with a senile story line.

Remember the old one about the auto young thingy comes to Hollywood and decides she's in love with a married movie star? He glows, of course, although his joints creak. His wife understands, of course, but then he realizes the kid is really serious. He's scared, of course, and comes to heel under the protection of his wife. End of situation comedy.

No kidding, that's what happened last Friday evening.

Youth Blinded by Cancer Hopeless

NEW YORK (AP) Doctors have termed "practically hopeless" the condition of 24-year-old Thomas Fuller of Norwood, N. Y., blinded by cancer.

Tommy's right eye was removed last June because of cancer. He lost the sight of his left eye Christmas Eve.

His parents, Edward and Mildred Fuller, 26, were told after the June operation that the boy had only a 25 per cent chance of living for a year.

The Fullers brought Tommy here Tuesday at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center. They are parents of another son, a hospital physician.

Friends of Mrs. Charles Hesterly will be glad to know she has returned to her home after being a patient in Cora Donnell Hospital.

DOROTHY DIX

15-Year-Old Wants Ideas for Dating

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm a boy of 15, just coming into the dating age. When my friends go out on dates, they usually attend a show, and have a soda. I'd like to do something different and original. Have you any ideas that wouldn't be too costly?

JERRY. Dear Jerry: Fortunately, you live in a good-sized city with diversified recreations, so your problem shouldn't be too acute. You must, however, choose a girl who is willing to wander a bit off the beaten track, and who is interested in something besides movies and a soda. The difficulty is not in finding new and original amusements, but in learning to appreciate them.

Perhaps you haven't yet acquired an ear for classical music, for instance, but don't let that keep you away from concerts. As you hear more and more good music, you'll learn to like it. Local newspapers carry ads and news items on doings in town. Look for, and try, the presentations of little theaters, lectures and discussions at your local university, musicals at small concert halls.

Dynheim excursions could be made to historical places, scenic attractions, or tours of local buildings, such as markets, city hall, libraries, or museums.

As a windup, here are a few

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm a girl of 15 and have been going steady with a boy of 17 for the past 10 months. I love him so much I'd rather die than lose him. Lately he has asked me to be intimate and I've refused. He gets very mad when I do. Should I give in?

DIANE. Dear Diane: You may feel new the anything is better than losing the boy you love. In a few years, or perhaps months, you see things in a different light. The you'll realize that being intimate with a man to whom you've given everything is a much worse fate than looking into the future for strength to answer no.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm married to a man much older than myself. He likes to sit home and relax. I want to go out once in a while and have fun. I've asked for one night a week out. I love my husband and children and wouldn't cheat, or anything like that, but I talk to other men and occasionally dance with them. Is this wrong?

MRS. E. G. G. Dear Mrs. E. G. G.: Your social life is a matter to be settled between you and your husband. The idea of a night out is OK, but in a manner in which you spend it must be open to criticism. Discretion and prudence should be the directors.

Griffin, author of the controversial 1952 best-seller "The Devil's Lane Outside," remained unmarried, a "doctor's cure" because he had trouble focusing his eyes. Since his vision mysteriously returned while he was working on another novel at his parents' farm, Wednesday.

My doctor says my vision may be completely cleared in about a month," he said.

He was fitted with corrective glasses yesterday to help his long-mused eye muscles coordinate his vision. "This is the most terrific shock I've ever had," he said.

These cylinders are very painful. It is like marching, pulling on your eyes. Yet things have steadied down. The doctor says for me for years, them as long as I can stand them.

"On gosh, if I can just keep my sight," statement: "every effort is being made to bring about improvement in the child's condition."

Indications are that the cancer has reached the child's brain and that this has caused loss of sight in the left eye.

In the remote hope that it might be of help, the child is being given a combination of radiation and drug treatment.

CHICAGO (AP) A group of California researchers suggested today that group treatment by "television therapy" over closed circuits might be one answer to the doctor shortage in many mental hospitals.

They reported good results in experiments with patients at Agnews State Hospital in Agnew, Calif.

The first clue that television could "reach" the patient, they said, came in the spring of 1953 when five sets were installed in the Agnews Hospital to receive commercial programs.

Writing in the current Archives of Neurology and Psychiatry, published by the American Medical Association, they gave this account:

"Some patients sat and talked for long periods with the performers and newscasters. Many of these same patients previously had been withdrawn, fearful and hopeless, refusing to talk or having anything to do with the doctors and other patients."

Others brightened and began to imitate the performers, especially the dancers.

Generally the patients became quieter and were more easily managed.

A larger percentage of the patients had developed the idea that no one cared about them, since the doctors and psychiatric technicians were too busy to devote much time to any individual. They had become afraid of attention, preferring to shrink unnoticed in the group.

Following up this angle, the researchers next tried closed circuit television. The therapy included face giving the impression the psychiatrist was talking to each patient individually.

Psychodramas were staged with patients acting out their conflicts and problems. Motion pictures dealing with mental hygiene and other educational subjects also were shown.

After tests, the researchers concluded that mentally ill patients will "improve significantly in behavior patterns when given therapy by closed circuit television."

Of equal importance, they said is the fact that many new techniques of psychotherapy have been developed but cannot be given widespread application because of the lack of trained personnel and time.

Closed circuit television may supply the answer to this problem, they said.

The report was made by Dr. Hyman Tucker, superintendent of Agnews State Hospital; Richard B. Lewis, professor of education at San Jose State College; and Mrs. Heather Lee Martin and Charles H. R. Over, postgraduate students in psychology at San Jose State College.

Clarksville, Arkansas is believed to be the nation's smallest city with a symphony orchestra.

Louisiana PSC Slow to Give Ark-La a Hike

State Capital Bureau

LITTLE ROCK (Special) — Louisiana's Public Service Commission members, who are elected have not been so quick as has the Arkansas PSC (appointed by the governor) to grant Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co. requests since W. R. Stephens, who this month became Ark-La's board chairman, acquired control through a stock transfer from Cities Service Co. in 1954.

An official of the Louisiana PSC said today that Ark-La has been trying for many months to induce it to raise rates and, at the same time, to adopt the "field price" basis for evaluating the gas from the utility's own wells.

The Louisiana commission had not approved higher rates, though it was indicated this might be done later. Neither has it given its sanction to the "field price" method, and as of today it seemed disinclined to use it. The effect would be to permit the utility to earn on its investment in production properties much more than normally is considered a fair rate.

An official of the Louisiana PSC said that he was attempting to obtain copies of all briefs filed in the Arkansas Supreme Court by protesting industrial customers and by Ark-La and the Arkansas PSC. The appeal from the PSC order adding $4,000,000 a year to bills of Ark-La's largest customers will be the subject of oral arguments before the Court on January 28.

The Court granted a motion of the protestants for permission to have three attorneys address it during a two-hour period on that day. Similar authorization was extended to the gas company and the PSC which are jointly defending the industrial rate schedule.

Ark-La apparently made strenuous efforts to conclude its Louisiana case pending in the hope that state but now it probably will have to wait until the Arkansas court disposes of the litigation.

The "field price" procedure for increasing gas rates and the PSC was first okayed by the Federal Power Commission on petition of the Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Co., but subsequently the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington reversed the ruling and the reversal has been upheld by the U. S. Supreme Court.

Apparently hopes of the gas industry that the "field price" method can be established, in lieu of the traditional investment rate base principle, rests on Ark-La's applications in Arkansas primarily and, to a lesser degree, in Louisiana where the matter is still up for the Commission.

The Louisiana PSC probably will have a representative on hand to hear the presentation to the Arkansas Court January 28. The appeal, in which the federal government has joined the protesting industries, will be submitted on that date.

Thereafter, the Court will ponder the evidence and the arguments while gas utilities and regulatory bodies throughout the country await the final decision, from which there can be no recourse unless a writ should be sought from the U. S. Supreme Court.

It was another hour before Matt came home. But then he surprised Sue by bringing her a gift, a small box wrapped and tied in white. "For the bride," he said gallantly, kissing her.

Sue laughed hysterically, and tore at the wrappings of her gift. The box contained a gold bracelet, from which dangled a half dozen little heart-shaped charms.

He might be a heel Sue was thinking — and was, certainly at times — but how could possibly be more enchanting than this tall, thin, brown-haired man who now smiled rather than behind his dark-rimmed glasses? "Oh, Matt," she said inadequately. Cleophas served dinner, and they talked of various matters. But Sue could not bring herself to speak of the things she so desperately wanted to know. She could not talk, even casually, about Lenore Black, nor ask did Matt know her?

Instead she chattered endlessly about the hospital; she said how much more work they were doing now than they had used to do — even in the time of Matt's father — and certainly during Matt's absence while in service.

"I can't see your father doing what you did for Genevieve Jones, Matt. The entire handling of her case has been masterly. And you did it."

"Oh, now, Sue —"

"I know. You have to pretend it's all in a day's work. But really, Matt — why, I can cite a dozen other cases."

She did cite them, including several where she had carried a good part of the medical load. People all over town, she declared, were praising him just as they had used to praise his father.

For the past, word-flooded hour, Matt had been bored. Now — "You're no capable a doctor, yourself, Susan. He divided, but that point of culture."

Matt had been looking back in his chair, smoking and watching her. Now when her head

"I wonder," said Alex from behind his mask. "If Matt had the lab make those sensitivity tests asked for, I have a good idea I won't welcome an allergic reaction after this session."

Sue's swathed head gestured to the circulating, who mopped the surgeon's perspiring brow and throat. "All made, Doctor!" she said brightly.

"You make 'em yourself?"

Sue's face was covered by the wide mask, and her turbulent able that she flushed.

Alex rose formally, and pushed the second chair toward her. "Sit down, Doctor. Would you like a clear?"

"No! Well, maybe. Look

Alex —"

"As I think you know, I have a few things to say to you."

He held the match in steady fingers, and she leaned toward it.

"Okay," she agreed, leaning work. "I know you're going to sure me for doing Matt's work."

"For doing it so constantly and without speaking a few select words to him on the subject."

"How do you know?"

"Matt's lack of reaction doesn't leave much doubt as to whether or not they have been said."

"Well, maybe," Sue agreed.

"But speaking of things one shouldn't do, Alex, you've let Cass take on a awful lot for you haven't you?"

"I frowned. Started to speak and flushed. "I was going to say that she does no more than she wants to."

"I've not a suggestion," Sue assured him. "Take the ease away from your wife. Turn Aunt Cordy over to Lenore Black. She's happy with her; does everything that woman asks of her. It would work, Alex."

"Yes," he agreed. "It might work. I think it would work fine until the day comes when Le-noire runs off with Matt."

He spoke quietly, but his eyes held

Sue's face.

She was instantly angered, he had expected that. Hot color flared into her thin cheeks, her eyes blazed, and her hands hooked into claws. She tried to speak, didn't make it and tried again.

"And Dr. Knapp's wife," said

Sue with dignity.

"Not if she can take your place."

"No, Sue. I don't mean to hurt you. But you should be looking to your defenses. People here in town admire Lenore, but a lot of us think you're pretty wonderful, too, my dear. Not a saint perhaps, but wonderful."

She went out; she went back to work — and that afternoon, she went home. Alex had given her things to think about. Plenty of things. A lot of them may have been based on mistaken conclusions, but one thing Sue knew for herself. Matt was moody and restless.

Sue made her big endeavor on June 15, which was the Matthias

Knapp wedding anniversary.

Their eleventh. It seemed the proper time and occasion to reach out a witty hand; even an innocent husband would recognize the importance of the day, and appre-

She laid her plans carefully.

Carefully she arranged a small night. The food was selected with Sue laughed hysterically, and tore at the wrappings of her gift.

The box contained a gold bracelet,

from which dangled a half dozen little heart-shaped charms.

He might be a heel Sue was thinking — and was, certainly at times — but how could possibly be more enchanting than this tall, thin, brown-haired man who now smiled rather than behind his dark-rimmed glasses? "Oh,

Matt," she said inadequately.

Cleophas served dinner, and they talked of various matters.

But Sue could not bring herself to speak of the things she so desperately wanted to know. She could not talk, even casually,

about Lenore Black, nor ask did

Matt know her?

Instead she chattered endlessly about the hospital; she said how much more work they were doing now than they had used to do — even in the time of Matt's father — and certainly during Matt's absence while in service.

"I can't see your father doing

what you did for Genevieve

Jones, Matt. The entire handling of her case has been masterly.

And you did it."

"Oh, now, Sue —"

"I know. You have to pretend it's all in a day's work. But really,

Matt — why, I can cite a dozen other cases."

She did cite them, including several where she had carried a good part of the medical load.

People all over town, she declared, were praising him just as they had used to praise his father.

For the past, word-flooded hour,

Matt had been bored. Now —

"You're no capable a doctor, yourself, Susan. He divided,

but that point of culture."

Matt had been looking back in his chair, smoking and watching her. Now when her head turned toward him, he smiled at her.

"All made, Doctor!" she said brightly.

"You make 'em yourself?"

Sue's face was covered by the wide mask, and her turbulent able was very good, and Alex

able that she flushed.

Alex rose formally, and pushed the second chair toward her. "Sit down, Doctor. Would you like a clear?"

"No! Well, maybe. Look Alex —"

"As I think you know, I have a few things to say to you."

He held the match in steady

licks old Center-Post Agitator Problem! THE LAUNDROMAT NEW WAY TO WASH

Westinghouse removed the Center-Post entirely . . . put smooth agitators at the inside of the wash basket. As the basket revolves, these agitators wash the clothes by lifting, turning, flushing through sudsy water 50 times a minute. Every piece is washed all the time, thoroughly, equally well.

(LARY) (MAYBE) (LARY)
The old-fashioned Center-Post agitator washes with a jerk-jerk motion. Clothes in the center (harsh action zone) get rough treatment; clothes in the lazy outside zone hardly move.

All These Plus Features

- Exclusive Weight-to-Save Door
- Water Saver
- Handy Laundrofile
- Uses only half as much detergent
- Uses 10 gallons less water

To the Arkansas Industrial Development Commission:

18c ... per 1,000 cubic feet is our average rate to large industries in Arkansas.

32c ... is the NATIONAL AVERAGE cost of equal fuel.

36c ... would be the cost of coal to an Arkansas industry.

45c ... would be the cost of fuel oil for an Arkansas industry.

70c ... some industrial rates in other states go this high.

*18c is less than the going wellhead price of gas on the Louisiana Gulf Coast . . . which means that our retail industrial rate is lower than the current wholesale rate at the well which many gas companies are paying. And for us to sell gas to industrial customers at less than replacement cost would be unfair to domestic users.

Customers using 65% of our industrial gas in Arkansas have recognized the cost-of-gas problems faced by Ark-La and the natural gas industry by signing long-term contracts . . . to protect their own needs and to enable the gas company to provide for those needs.

Low Cost Natural Gas
Will Continue To Attract
Industry To Arkansas

... and our rates to HOME CONSUMERS average 54c compared to a national average of 89c

The recent 35c raise in crude oil prices further widens the gap between natural gas and fuel oil . . . and will bring increasing demand for natural gas by economy-minded manufacturers and other industries . . . this means that Ark - La's rate will be more attractive than ever to industry.
